Donna Mills didn't always want to be an actress. "[As a child] I always thought I would grow up to become a dancer," she says.

But it wasn't until she was a young woman that she auditioned for a play in Chicago, and received the part to her surprise. "I liked acting, but I never thought I would make a career out of it."

But after performing in the play, she discovered that she wanted to make a career out of acting. "The play was a comedy and I loved hearing the laughter of the audience," she says.

Mills says the most enjoyable experience she has had acting was when she starred on Knots Landing as Abby Sumner. She especially enjoyed the laughter that could be heard around the set, especially from William Devane, who played Gregory Sumner. "We had a lot of fun on that set," she says.

Besides the camaraderie, Mills also enjoyed the fact that her character was her own. "[Abby] was a character that I created for nine years."

Today Mills has a five-year-old daughter to whom she devotes much of her time. "Bringing up a child gives me the most satisfaction, and the most rewards, but it's also very challenging." Mills' hobbies include playing tennis on a regular basis, and interior decorating. She is currently working on a project that will involve promoting eye makeup products on the Internet and QVC.
